Re: William Steven's clothing
sent to tailors.

Dear Sir:-

In my report to you of September 27th, 1926, covering the above subject, I note that I omitted to mention that Mr. Parker's recollection is that Austin Grealis, who is now working for the Pennsylvania Railroad, was the messenger employed by his firm and who made the delivery of the suit and brought back the suits to be cleaned. Parker says that he did not see the suit in question.

He further states that there was nothing unusual in the fact that the messenger was directed to go to the back door. In fact, many people do not care to have trades people call at the front door, more particularly, under conditions as existed as Mrs. Hall's home at that time.

Respectfully yours,

David Thompson.
